BEER AGENTS PLACED ON PROBATION BY THE COURT

Judge McIlvaine Allows Charleroi and Dunlevy Men Their Freedom

THEY MUST BEHAVE WELL

May be Recalled at Any Time for Sentence—Costs Placed on Defendants.

In passing upon the case of the Commonwealth against C. C. Battaglini, Fabri Raffaelil and August Bertoletti, who were agents for the Victor Brewing company of Westmoreland county and charged with selling beer in Charleroi and along the river district, Judge McIlvaine in court yesterday tried a new experiment, as he called it. He directed that proceedings be stopped, but at the same time warned the defendants that the charges against them would still hang as a sword over their heads, and if ever again they engaged in this business, they would be re-arersted, and would make themselves liable to receive the maximum sentence in the charges against them.

The three men entered pleas of no defense to charges of conspiracy and selling liquor without license.

The action of the court was taken upon the suggestion of the Vesta Coal company, of the river section, which was back of the prosecution of these three men, who sold liquor among the miners of the coal company. It was believed the ends of justice would be served by allowing the defendant to go upon the payment of costs and with the warning that if they violated the trust imposed in them, the penalty would be served.

INJURIES SUSTAINED IN FALL FROM BUGGY FATAL TO YOUNG MAN

Charles Mosier of Bentleyville Unaware of Serious Hurts Until Within a Short Time Before His Death.

Charles Mosier, aged about 30 years, died at his home in Bentleyville yesterday morning at 11 o'clock, from the result of injuries received when returning home the previous night from Charleroi, where he had attended the Forepaugh and Sells Brothers show.

Mosier had come in on the train and attended the show in the afternoon. Meeting Ben Cox and Roy Grubbs, who had driven in, he asked them to allow him to return in the buggy. They consented, and in the evening just after dusk started home. At the bend at Lincoln avenue and First street the horse became frightened from a broken trace, and started on a mad runaway. Mosier was dashed from his seat, and fell to the street his head hitting against the curb. Cox jumped from the buggy, and Gubbs, who had been driving succeeded in retaining his seat, and stopped the animal at the garbage furnace.

Cox and Mosier went home then with Grubbs in the buggy. Mosier at times complaining of his head hurting. He was accompanied home by one of the men, after Bentevyille was reached, and he went to bed at once. Yesterday morning he arose as usual, but about 9 o'clock began acting queerly and Mrs. Mosier sent for a doctor, who ascertained that the skull was fractured at the base of the brain. Two hours later Mosier died.

He is survived by his wife and two small children. Mrs. Emma Deems of Charlreoi was a sister.

BAPTISTS IN LEAD

Best First Presbyterian Baseball Tossers by One Sided Score.

WORK OF THE PITCHERS

The Baptist team of the Church league demontsrated to the First Presbtyerians last night how the game of baseball should be played, and won their second game by a score of 10 to 4. The game was mainly Kearns, the Baptist pitcher and captain. He had the Presbyterians on his boat, except at a very few junctures, and when the smoke rolled away had nine strikeouts to his credit, in the six innings of play and had given but four hits.

His team-mates were not behind in hitting, and registered 11 safeties off Provance and Larue. The Presbtyerians made one score in the first and two in the next, closing by one in the third and then seemed unable to tally further, and likewise unable to prevent the Baptists from whiffing around the four corners in bunches of twos and threes. A Notable Gathering.

While it has been duly announced and heralded in church circles, the public in general may not be aware of the importance and magnitude of the convention of the Western Pennsylvania Christian Missionary Society that met in Charleroi yesterday for a three days' session. This body embraces a field that is the birth place of the Christian denomination, and is rich not only in historical associaions, but in active and fervent propagation of one of the most virile creeds of dogmatic religion. While the convention is primarily in the interests of the propaganda of the faith, it is nevertheless an exposition of the vital principles of Christianity, such as stir communities and bring men and women to a realization of the duties they owe to God as well as to their fellow men.

In addition to the routine work of the body, many notable addresses will be delivered by ministers eminent in the denomination. These are along lines that have a practical application to human thought and action, and coming at a time when there is much social unrest and discontent, are doubly profitable. This convention is a notable gathering and it will leave its impress on the community by the influence of its preaching and teachings.

No Apologies

Pennsylvania in all its industrial ramifications was never happier than it is today. The existing tariff legislation is showing its benefits in the increases in wages accorded the employes of mills, mines and railroads throughout the State, and most particularly in the Pittsburg district The hum of industry is heard on every hand, and in spite of much unrest and expressed discontent, the causes of which are brought about more by individual conduct than by economic conditions, no one can help but admit that industrially the State is in a good condition.

No apologies are necessary for the existence and operation of the new tariff law. Busy mills and mines with increased wages for employes is ample evidence that the policy is not detrimental to industry. High prices may be a drawback, but with money to buy the condition is infinitely better than low prices with no money to expend.

A Bureau of Mines

By the passage of his bill establishing a National Bureau of Mines, Congressman Geo. F. Huff of Greensburg regards this as the crowning effort of his Congressional career. The bill is designed to provide for the safety and uplift of the miner, by giving him the benefit of the latest discoveries and inventions of science and mechanical art under the fostering care of the National Government. By the constant employment of a staff of expert mining engineers in the field of investigation, new methods for both safety and increased production may be discovered and applied without the wasteful expenditure of life and property acquired in the hard school of experience.

In securing the passage of his bill through Congress Col. Huff had the hearty co-operation of his colleagues from this section. Congressman J.K. Tener, both by vote and personal work, gave his aid to the bill, as did the others who have big mining interests in their districts. The bill did not meet with the favor of the House and Senate leaders, who opposed it most bitterly, charging discrimination in the field of industry. The claim was urged that the mining industry was no more entitled to a bureau than many of the others, but those Congressmen who have been in touch with some of the frightful disasters that have spread wholesale desolation in entire communities had the strongest argument. The bill is now ready for the President's signature, and is most likely to meet with Executive approval.

The other day a man with a new automobile got the thing started, and could not ascertain how it should be stopped. He ran past an automobile garage several times and yelled for them to stop the dratted vehicle, and finally got them to do it. Not so long before a muscular man got in a big machine, and soon learned more about starting it than he knew about stopping. He slid into the rear seat, and as the gasoline devil whizzed past a telephone pole grasped the pole, and hung for dear life, until the owner came to his aid, and turned off the too much juice.

THE BOY INVENTOR.

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS.

(Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.)

Once upon a time there was a boy—not a story boy, a real boy—who was of an inventive turn of mind. We shall call him Dick. That was not his name, but it doesn't matter, so far as the story is concerned. Dick was a farmer's boy, and there wasn't at that time anything in farming to stimulate invention. Now there are steam plows and mowing machines of infinite variety to start a boy on the road of contrivance. But then the plowing and the reaping were done in the old fashioned way.

Dick was born an inventor and if he had lived on a desert island would doubtless have invented things. The only implement he had to work with was a jackknife, but this he put to very good use. There are lots of people in the world who have every advantage and accomplish nothing. There are a few who have none and accomplish a great deal. Dick was one of the latter kind. With his jackknife he whittled out a model of a machine he had contrived, and when he had put it together, his face lighting up with the enthusiasm of genius, he took it to his father.

It has been often said of a boy in derision that he knows more than his father. This could be truly said of Dick. The poor fellow was crushed at seeing his parent give his model a kick that reduced it to fragments, saying:

"I'll have no boy about me who will spend his time at such foolish things."

In order to keep his son from "foolish things" and enable him to earn an honest living he apprenticed his son to Tom Hogan, a blacksmith. Dick took with him the remains of the model his father had broken up and after his day's work was done spent his time putting it together, replacing those parts that were beyond repair with new ones. When he had it finished he began to think what he should do with it. He had seen it kicked to pieces once and didn't fancy running the risk of having it destroyed again. However, Hogan was a kind master, and Dick finally concluded to let him have a look at it. He not only let him see it, but showed him how it worked.

The little fellow demonstrated his machine, absorbed in its clumsy motions, for it was but an imperfect affair, occasionally looking up timidly, remembering the last kicking it got and fearing another, now calling attention to some defect that needed improvement, now to one that, after much thought and experiment, had been overcome, at all times showing that zeal necessary to the breaking down of obstacles which stand in the way of the accomplishment of great results.

The blacksmith looked down on his apprentice and his contrivance, a singular expression on his face as he compared what he could do with his sledge with the results to be achieved by the boy's ingenious invention, now and again turning from the machine to Dick, his eye resting on the young face with a curious wonder.

The next chapter in this simple story is the boy superintending the construction of a machine on the lines of his model, the cost of which was provided by his master, the blacksmith, who had now become his friend and patron. When it was finished it was found to work, practically doing automatically what from the time the earliest garments were made by man had been done by hand. The first power loom had been invented and constructed.

Wealth was now within the grasp of the two, who became partners. The blacksmith furnished the means for building looms, for which Dick gave him a portion of the profits. But this was a mere trifle in comparison with the benefits conferred upon mankind. Thousands who before had been unclad or were covered only with the coarsest or scantiest clothing were now able to procure ample and comfortable apparel.

It was a year after Dick's apprenticeship that his master wrote his apprentice's father that he would bring to see him a wealthy gentleman who was the inventor of the celebrated power loom. On the day appointed Tom Hogan and Dick appeared before the old gentleman, who asked where was the great inventor.

"There he is," said the blacksmith, "your own son. The model he showed you you kicked to pieces. He reconstructed it and showed it to me. Instead of bringing him up as I contracted, to earn a miserable living with his hands, I have put him in a way to make a fortune by his brain. You destroyed his model, but you could not blot out the work of his genius."

We have pictured Dick looking up at the blacksmith as he showed his reconstructed machine, the blacksmith looking down on the young inventor. There was a third picture, the father looking on his son, whose model of a machine that had revolutionized the weaving of the world he had kicked to pieces. Mortification gave place to wonder, and wonder was chased away by pride in his boy, who had produced this marvelous result. Whether Dick first embraced his father or the father embraced Dick does not matter. At any rate, they came together, the son shutting off the father's apologies.

Dick did more than this. He made the old man not only comfortable, but administered to his every wish. The inventor and his partner continued to grow rich, and if they could have had a royalty on every power loom that has been constructed to this day they would be the wealthiest men in the world.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL

Health is Worth Saving and Some Charleroi People Know How to Save It.

Many Charleroi people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger when all diseases and aches and pains due to weak kidneys can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is a Charleroi citizen's recommendation.

Mrs. William McBride, 508 Lincoln avenue, Charleroi, Pa., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in our family for several years. Our first experience with them took place while we were living in Beaver Falls. A member of our family was at that time suffering from pains in the small of the back and other symptoms of kidney trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills proved of great benefit and there was no return attack of the trouble for some time. About a month ago, Doan's Kidney Pills were again procured at Piper Bros.' Drug Store and they proved as beneficial as before. From our experience with Doan's Kidney Pills, I do not hesitate to recommend them."

PENROSE HAS PLANS TO SAVE

Senior Senator Proposes to Wipe Out Postoffice Department Deficit

BILLS ALREADY PRESENTED

The Democratic "Post" Tells What the Protection Secured by Pennsylvania's Leader Has Done For Wages In and About the Pittsburgh District.

It is a fact, cold, hard and easy of demonstration that United States Senator Boies Penrose, the senior senator from Pennsylvania, is better equipped for dealing with the nation's postal affairs than any other member of the United States congress, or any other American, for that matter. There is no possible way of concealing the fact that Senator Penrose is, and for many years has been, an exceedingly busy man but with all his cares and responsibilities he has given an immense amount of hard work and careful study to postal affairs until he has become the government's accepted authority on all postal matters. As chairman of the senate committee on postoffices and postroads Senator Penrose has worked out an economy scheme which the authorities claim confidently will work a saving to the government of probably $10,000,000 annually. This is not an idle boast. It is a wholesome fact and as chairman of the committee charged with postal legislation Senator Penrose has already introduced into the senate bills designed to bring about this wonderful revolution. One of the Penrose bills proposes to cut off all unnecessary expenditures in the post office department by economizing the time of mail carriers by requiring the placing of receptacles at the door or entrance of residences and business houses for the deposit of mail by carriers. The existing practice of compelling carriers to ring door bells, wait for an answer if any answer is forthcoming and then consume additional time in placing the mail where it will be reasonably safe in case the door bell is not answered, eats unreasonably into the time of the carriers, and by a modest estimate costs the government at least $5,000,000 annually. Another of the Penrose bills provides that on circulars sent through the mails and upon which postage is not prepaid double postage shall be charged on delivery. This measure strikes at a glaring abuse of the mails. Now in all cases where unstamped circulars are sent through the mails notices must be sent to addresses. This bill will abolish the custom on the part of postage dodgers and will provide pay for the time consumed in securing the required postage. This saving of time, it is also estimated, will reach annually into millions. Another Penrose bill directed at postal economy has already been reported from the Penrose committee on postoffices and postroads with a favorable recommendation. It aims at the repeal of the requirement that postmasters issuing money orders shall immediately by mail notify the postmaster on whom the money order is drawn. This precaution is amply provided for and the saving of time in just such cases it is estimated will save at least $600,000 annually. Still another Penrose bill aims at abolishing the return receipt for a registered letter or package. The receipt issued when the letter or package is posted is sufficient and in this apparently trifling way around $100,000 is to be saved to the government annually.

Senator Penrose is abundantly confident that the postoffice deficit, one of the most perplexing problems with which the government has to deal, will in the near future disappear when the legislation he has personally designed is enacted into laws. Not in a long, long time has Pennsylvania had a senator more industrious and more capable of intelligent effort than is Senator Penrose. In fact his capability and his industry have confused his political enemies, if any there be, and his knowledge of detail and his readiness and willingness to grasp the confusing work of the great postal system of America has simply delighted his admirers.

Every day the world is getting additional evidence that postal affairs and their skillful handling are but an incident in the good work of Senator Penrose. It will be recalled that less than a year ago Senator Penrose stood harder and stronger than any other man in the United States senate for the policy of protection. He had studied the tariff until he had become familiar with every feature of it. The industrial conditions at that particular time were indeed threatening. Confidence had been shaken severely and labor and money were unemployed. In fact the industrial patient was very sick and it was a bad time for experiments. By day and by night, in season and out, Senator Penrose fought for sufficient tariff to protect both labor and capital. He threw into the fight his strong personality and his almost inexhaustible fund of tariff knowledge and he got for the nation generally and Pennsylvania in particular what he fully realized in the beginning would be for the best interests of all concerned. He yielded only where yielding seemed a virtue and in the end he accomplished more for the whole people than was ever before accomplished by any other senator from Pennsylvania. The Pittsburg "Post," that earnest advocate of real Democracy, agrees that Senator Penrose accomplished much by his magnificent battle for protection. The "Post" does not give the credit direct to Senator Penrose but it gives the detailed result of the existing tariff legislation in the list of concerns in and about Pittsburg which have advanced wages since the tariff was revised as follows.

President Brown of the New York Central announces that the railroad wage advances already made or to be made before the end of the current year will exceed $100,000,000. Jones & Laughlin Steel Company, 6,000 men, 6 per cent. United States Steel Corporation, Pittsburgh district, 100,000 men, 6 per cent. Pittsburgh Coal Operators' Association, 40,000 men, 5 55 per cent. Pittsburgh Railways Company, 4 000 men, about 4 per cent. Pennsylvania Railroad Company, several thousand men, 6 per cent. Baltimore & Ohio railroad, several thousand men, 6 per cent. New York Central railroad, several thousand men, 6 per cent. Spang-Chalfant Steel Company, about 600 men, 10 per cent. Republic Iron and Steel Company, several thousand men, 6 per cent. Postal Telegraph Company, 250 men, 5 to 25 per cent. Central Pennsylvania operators, exclusive of the Pittsburgh Coal Company and including coke manufacturers, 100,000 men, about 6 per cent.

Upon this magnificent record the regular Republican organization is proud to stand. No apologies are necessary and the ambitious fellows who are hunting for office with a dark lantern with a view to blinding the voters of the State to the real condition and the real record of achievement are not likely to make substantial progress. Pennsylvania in all its industrial ramifications was never happier than it is today. The voters have their minds made up on this very important fact.

THE BEY'S GUEST.

He Was Ready For the Emergency and Conquered the African.

A show of force is often the best kind of diplomacy. A writer in the Paris Temps tells a story of the French admiral Dupetit Thouars, who had been intrusted with the mission of exacting reparation from an African bey who had insulted a French consul.

As Dupetit-Thouars' demands were supported by the forcible argument of loaded cannon, the bey acknowledged that he had been too hasty and proffered profuse apologies. He even invited the admiral to his table and had a sumptuous repast prepared for his guest.

The consul warned the admiral to be on his guard.

"The bey is inclined to be malicious," said he, "and when he strokes his beard and smiles you may be sure that he is concocting some mischief."

"We shall see," was Dupetit-Thouars' reply.

He reached the bey's palace in good time. Profuse compliments and salutations were exchanged. All at once the admiral's foot met some soft, hairy substance lying on the carpet under the table. He bent down and saw a huge lion showing his formidable teeth. The bey smiled and stroked his beard.

Dupetit-Thouars did not wince, but called his dragoman.

"My pistols," was all he said.

The servant saluted, retired and brought back a pair of pistols on a silver tray. The admiral took them and placed them on the table before him. But the bey, still smiling, continued to stroke his patriarchal beard.

"Tell the commander," he said to the dragoman, "that if those pistols are for the purpose of blowing out my lion's brains they are quite insufficient and perfectly useless."

Then, like a skilled fencer countering his opponent's thrust, after the bey's ironical advice had been translated Dupetit-Thouars replied:

"Tell his highness that my pistols are not there to kill his lion, but to blow his own brains out at the first movement of this objectionable carpet."

Gravely, but a little pale, the man interpreted.

The smile died away on the bey's lips, and he no longer stroked his beard.

"My lion," said he, "is too well trained even to scratch one of my guests, but since he is not wanted he shall be sent away."

At a word from the bey the lion slowly and heavily left the room, like an obedient dog.

Foiled.

Noiselessly, but with all his might, the burglar tugged at the dressing table drawer. In vain. It refused to open. He tugged again.

"Give it another jerk," said a voice behind him.

The burglar turned.

The owner of the house was sitting up in bed and looking at him with an expression of the deepest interest on his face.

"Jerk it again. There's a lot of valuable property in that drawer, but we haven't been able to open it since the damp weather began. If you can pull it out I'll give you a handsome royalty on everything that's"—

But the burglar had jumped out through the window, taking a part of the sash with him.—Exchange.

WHEN WOMEN REGISTER.

A Hotel Clerk Explains Why a Blotter Is Necessary.

"Hotel clerks get to be great observers of human nature," said an old hotel "lobbyist." "During the many hours out of each day that I spend warming this chair I have learned many tricks of their trade which go to prove my statement.

"In fact, this clerk here has a peculiar trick of his own which shows how keen an observer he is. If you watch him at work you will find whenever a woman is registering he holds a blotter so as to hide the other names on the page. At first when I noticed it I thought that he was merely holding the blotter in readiness to use it on the newly written name, but when I found that he did it only when a woman was registering my curiosity got the better of me, and I asked the reason.

"'Why,' said he, 'women are the most nervous creatures in the world. I hold that blotter up to show that I am not watching them write their names and at the same time to keep them from trying to excel the other handwriting on the page. If they noticed that I was watching them closely it is a safe bet that they would get nervous and make an awful botch of their signatures trying to be fancy. On the other hand, if they saw a particularly pretty signature on the next line the chances are that they would try to improve theirs with a flourish or two, which generally means a choice blot to be scratched out by yours truly.'

"I decided to test his theory by looking over a woman's shoulder while she registered. The result was just what he said it would be."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A Story That Varies.

There is a story more or less diffused of a young bride on her wedding day playing the game of hide and seek and concealing herself in one of those ancient carved chests of large size. After she had got in the lid closed, and she found herself unable to raise it again, for it fastened with a spring, and she was shut in. Search was made for her in every quarter but the right one, and great perplexity and dismay were caused by her disappearance. It was not till years after, when chance led to the opening of the chest, that the body of the young bride was discovered and the mystery of her disappearance solved.

The story is found in so many places that it may be questioned whether it is true of any one of them. Rogers tells it of a palace in Modena. The chest in which the poor bride was found is shown at Bramshill, in Hampshire, the residence of Sir John Cope. Another similar chest with precisely the same story attached to it was long shown at Marwell Old Hall, between Winchester and Bishop's Waltham.

The folk tale of Catskin or Peau d'Ane represents the girl flying with her bridal dresses from a marriage that is repugnant to her, and as this tale is found all over Europe it may have metamorphosed itself into that of the bride who got into a chest and died there.—Cornhill Magazine.

Detecting a Thief.

Some of the stories in the "Folklore of the Holy Land" seem to be at least founded on fact. And, indeed, when we come down to quite recent times we find undoubtedly genuine stories that might have been told of the days of the caliphs.

A goldsmith of Jaffa complained that his house had been robbed and remarked that the Egyptian occupation had not brought security.

The pasha promised redress.

The next day he came to the man's shop and in the presence of a great crowd ordered the executioner to give the door a hundred lashes.

Then he stooped as if to listen. "The door tells nonsense," he cried; "another hundred!"

He stooped again.

"The same tale; the door persists that the thief is somewhere in this crowd of honest people and that he has some of the dust and cobwebs from the shop on his turboosh."

He had his eye on the crowd and saw a man hastily raise his hand to brush his fez.

The man was arrested and confessed his guilt.

A Chromatic Love Affair.

"Marooned!" muttered the villain, turning white and striking his forehead.

Violet, pearl of women, had refused him again.

He lapsed into a brown study wondering if he were too green to win any woman's love. Perhaps she objected to his prematurely gray hair, or could it be that the cardinal virtues of his rival outweighed his old gold?

The hero entering, black as a thunder cloud, readily solved the mystery.

"There's a yellow streak in you!" he cried. "In the hope of winning my betrothed, Violet, you have jilted Alice, and it has made Alice blue!"

The villain rose, madder than a hornet, purpling with rage beneath his tan. But before he could speak the hero had plinked him with his sword.

Violet screamed. Terror caught her.

But her lover soothed her.

"Red of him at last," he murmured, folding her in his arms and kissing her cherry lips as the crimson sun sank in the west, partially obscured by the London smoke.

BEER AGENTS PLACED ON PROBATION BY THE COURT

Judge McIlvaine Allows Charleroi and Dunlevy Men Their Freedom

THEY MUST BEHAVE WELL

May be Recalled at Any Time for Sentence—Costs Placed on Defendants.

In passing upon the case of the Commonwealth against C. C. Battaglini, Fabri Raffaelli and August Bertoletti, who were agents for the Victor Brewing company of Westmoreland county and charged with selling beer in Charleroi and along the river district, Judge McIlvaine in court yesterday tried a new experiment, as he called it. He directed that proceedings be stopped, but at the same time warned the defendants that the charges against them would still hang as a sword over their heads, and if ever again they engaged in this business, they would be re arersted and would make themselves liable to receive the maximum sentence in the charges against them.

The three men entered pleas of no defense to charges of conspiracy and selling liquor without license.

The action of the court was taken upon the suggestion of the Vesta Coal company, of the river section, which was back of the prosecution of these three men, who sold liquor among the miners of the coal company. It was believed the ends of justice would be served by allowing the defendant to go upon the payment of costs and with the warning that if they violated the trust imposed in them, the penalty would be served.

The deceased was formerly employed in the Casino barber shop on McKean avenue, and had many friends in Charleroi. The body will be interred in a Greene county cemetery.

INJURIES SUSTAINED IN FALL FROM BUGGY FATAL TO YOUNG MAN

Charles Mosier of Bentleyville Unaware of Serious Hurts Until Within a Short Time Before His Death.

Charles Mosier, aged about 30 years, died at his home in Bentleyville yesterday morning at 11 o'clock, from the result of injuries received when returning home the previous night from Charleroi, where he had attended the Forepaugh and Sells Bros show.

Mosier had come in on the train and attended the show in the afternoon. Meeting Ben Cox and Roy Grubbs, who had driven in, he asked them to allow him to return in the buggy. They consented, and in the evening just after dusk started home. At the bend at Lincoln avenue and First street the horse became frightened from a broken trace, and started on a mad runaway. Mosier was dasbed from his seat, and fell to the curb. Cox jumped from the buggy, and Gubbs, who had been driving succeeded in retaining his seat, and stopped the animal at the garbage furnace.

Cox and Mosier went home then with Grubbs in the buggy. Mosier at [illegible] morning. He was accompanied home by one of the men, after Bentleyville was reached, and he went to bed at once. Yesterday morning he arose as usual, but about 9 o'clock began acting queerly and Mrs. Mosier sent for a doctor, who ascertained that the skull was fractured at the base of the brain. Two hours later Mosier died.

He is survived by his wife and two small children. Mrs. Emma Deems of Charleroi was a sister.

The matter was placed in the hands of the street committee.

A bill from Hastings, Piper and Owens of $114.65, being 10 per cent held back on paving on Lincoln avenue between First and Second streets, was ordered paid, also one of $61.25 for the Board of Health. Borough Clerk Nickeson stated he had received prices of "Danger" signs, which it is proposed to put up at corners for the regulation of automobile driving, and was instructed to secure some samples.

BAPTISTS IN LEAD

Best First Presbyterian Baseball Tossers by One Sided Score.

WORK OF THE PITCHERS

The Baptist team of the Church league demontsrated to the First Presbtyerians last night how the game of baseball should be played, and won their second game by a score of 10 to 4. The game was mainly Kearns, the Baptist pitcher and captain. He had the Presbyterians on his boat, except at a very few junctures, and when the smoke rolled away had nine strikeouts to his credit, in the six innings of play and had given but four hits.

His team-mates were not behind in hitting, and registered 11 safeties off Provance and Larue. The Presbyterians made one score in the first and two in the next, closing by one in the third and then seemed unable to tally further, and likewise unable to prevent the Baptists from whiffing around the four corners in bunches of twos and threes. A Notable Gathering.

While it has been duly announced and heralded in church circles, the public in general may not be aware of the importance and magnitude of the convention of the Western Pennsylvania Christian Missionary Society that met in Charleroi yesterday for a three days' session. This body embraces a field that is the birth place of the Christian denomination, and is rich not only in historical associaions, but in active and fervent propagation of one of the most virile creeds of dogmatic religion. While the convention is primarily in the interests of the propaganda of the faith, it is nevertheless an exposition of the vital principles of Christianity, such as stir communities and bring men and women to a realization of the duties they owe to God as well as to their fellow men.

In addition to the routine work of the body, many notable addresses will be delivered by ministers eminent in the denomination. These are along lines that have a practical application to human thought and action, and coming at a time when there is much social unrest and discontent, are doubly profitable. This convention is a notable gathering and it will leave its impress on the community by the influence of its preaching and teachings.

No Apologies

Pennsylvania in all its industrial ramifications was never happier than it is today. The existing tariff legislation is showing its benefits in the increases in wages accorded the employes of mills, mines and railroads throughout the State, and most particularly in the Pittsburg district. The hum of industry is heard on every hand, and in spite of much unrest and expressed discontent, the causes of which are brought about more by individual conduct than by economic conditions, no one can help but admit that industrially the State is in a good condition.

No apologies are necessary for the existence and operation of the new tariff law. Busy mills and mines with increased wages for employes is ample evidencce that the policy is not detrimental to industry. High prices may be a drawback, but with money to buy the condition is infinitely better than low prices with no money to expend.

A Bureau of Mines

By the passage of his bill establishing a National Bureau of Mines, Congressman Geo. F. Huff of Greensburg regards this as the crowning effort of his Congressional career. The bill is designed to provide for the safety and uplift of the miner, by giving him the benefit of the latest discoveries and inventions of science and mechanical art under the fostering care of the National Government. By the constant employment of a staff of expert mining engineers in the field of investigation, new methods for both safety and increased production may be discovered and applied without the wasteful expenditure of life and property acquired in the hard school of experience.

In securing the passage of his bill through Congress Col. Huff had the hearty co-operation of his colleagues [illegible] Congressman John K. Tener, both by vote and personal work, gave his aid to the bill, as did the others who have big mining interests in their districts. The bill did not meet with the favor of the House and Senate leaders, who opposed it most bitterly, charging discrimination in the field of industry. The claim was urged that the mining industry was no more entitled to a bureau than many of the others, but those Congressmen who have been in touch with some of the frightful disasters that have spread wholesale desolation in entire communities had the strongest argument. The bill is now ready for the President's signature, and is most likely to meet with Executive approval.

The other day a man with a new automobile got the thing started, and could not ascertain how it should be stopped. He ran past an automobile garage several times and yelled for them to stop the dratted vehicle, and finally got them to do it. Not so long before a muscular man got in a big machine, and soon learned more about starting it than he knew about stopping. He slid into the rear seat, and as the gasoline devil whizzed past a telephone pole grasped the pole, and hung for dear life, until the owner came to his aid, and turned off the too much juice.

THE BOY INVENTOR.

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS.

(Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.)

Once upon a time there was a boy—nor a story boy, a real boy—who was of an inventive turn of mind. We shall call him Dick. That was not his name, but it doesn't matter, so far as the story is concerned. Dick was a farmer's boy, and there wasn't at that time anything in farming to stimulate invention. Now there are steam plows and mowing machines of infinite variety to start a boy on the road of contrivance. But then the plowing and the reaping were done in the old fashioned way.

Dick was born an inventor and if he had lived on a desert island would doubtless have invented things. The only implement he had to work with was a jackknife, but this he put to very good use. There are lots of people in the world who have every advantage and accomplish nothing. There are a few who have none and accomplish a great deal. Dick was one of the latter kind. With his jackknife he whittled out a model of a machine he had contrived and when he had put it together, his face lighting up with the enthusiasm of genius, he took it to his father.

It has been often said of a boy in derision that he knows more than his father. This could be truly said of Dick. The poor fellow was crushed at seeing his parent give his model a kick that reduced it to fragments, saying:

"I'll have no boy about me who will spend his time at such foolish things."

In order to keep his son from "foolish things" and enable him to earn an honest living he apprenticed his son to Tom Hogan, a blacksmith. Dick took with him the remains of the model his father had broken up and after his day's work was done spent his time putting it together, replacing those parts that were beyond repair with new ones. When he had it finished he began to think what he should do with it. He had seen it kicked to pieces once and didn't fancy running the risk of having it destroyed again. However, Hogan was a kind master, and Dick finally concluded to let him have a look at it. He not only let him see it, but showed him how it worked.

The little fellow demonstrated his machine, absorbed in its clumsy motions, for it was but an imperfect affair, occasionally looking up timidly, remembering the last kicking it got and fearing another, now calling attention to some defect that needed improvement, now to one that, after much thought and experiment, had been overcome, at all times showing that zeal necessary to the breaking down of obstacles which stand in the way of the accomplishment of great results.

The blacksmith looked down on his apprentice and his contrivance, a singular expression on his face as he compared what he could do with his sledge with the results to be achieved by the boy's ingenious invention, now and again turning from the machine to Dick, his eye resting on the young face with a curious wonder.

The next chapter in this simple story is the boy superintending the construction of a machine on the lines of his model, the cost of which was provided by his master, the blacksmith, who had now become his friend and patron. When it was finished it was found to work, practically doing automatically what from the time the earliest garments were made by man had been done by hand. The first power loom had been invented and constructed.

Wealth was now within the grasp of the two, who became partners. The blacksmith furnished the means for building looms, for which Dick gave him a portion of the profits. But this was a mere trifle in comparison with the benefits conferred upon mankind. Thousands who before had been unclad or were covered only with the coarsest or scantiest clothing were now able to procure ample and comfortable apparel.

It was a year after Dick's apprenticeship that his master wrote his apprentice's father that he would bring to see him a wealthy gentleman who was the inventor of the celebrated power loom. On the day appointed Tom Hogan and Dick appeared before the old gentleman, who asked where was the great inventor.

"There he is," said the blacksmith, "your own son. The model he showed you you kicked to pieces. He reconstructed it and showed it to me. Instead of bringing him up as I contracted, to earn a miserable living with his hands, I have put him in a way to make a fortune by his brain. You destroyed his model, but you could not blot out the work of his genius."

We have pictured Dick looking up at the blacksmith as he showed his reconstructed machine, the blacksmith looking down on the young inventor. There was a third picture, the father looking on his son, whose model of a machine that had revolutionized the weaving of the world he had kicked to pieces. Mortification gave place to wonder, and wonder was chased away by pride in his boy, who had produced this marvelous result. Whether Dick first embraced his father or the father embraced Dick does not matter. At any rate, they came together, the son [illegible] the father's apologies.

Dick did more than this. He made the old man not only comfortable, but administered to his every wish. The inventor and his partner continued to grow rich, and if they could have had a royalty on every power loom that has been constructed to this day they would be the wealthiest men in the world.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL

Health is Worth Saving and Some Charleroi People Know How to Save It.

Many Charleroi people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger when all diseases and aches and pains due to weak kidneys can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is a Charleroi citizen's recommendation.

Mrs. William McBride, 508 Lincoln avenue, Charleroi, Pa., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in our family for several years. Our first experience with them took place while we were living in Beaver Falls. A member of our family was at that time suffering from pains in the small of the back and other symptoms of kidney trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills proved of great benefit and there was no return attack of the trouble for some time. About a month ago, Doan's Kidney Pills were again procured at Piper Bros.' Drug Store and they proved as beneficial as before. From our experience with Doan's Kidney Pills, I do not hesitate to recommend them."

PENROSE HAS PLANS TO SAVE

Senior Senator Proposes to Wipe Out Postoffice Department Deficit

BILLS ALREADY PRESENTED

The Democratic "Post" Tells What the Protection Secured by Pennsylvania's Leader Has Done For Wages In and About the Pittsburgh District.

It is a fact, cold, hard and easy of demonstration that United States Senator Boies Penrose, the senior senator from Pennsylvania, is better equipped for dealing with the nation's postal affairs than any other member of the United States congress, or any other American for that matter There is no possible way of concealing the [illegible] many years has been an exceedingly busy man but with all his cares and responsibilities he has given an immense amount of hard work and careful study to postal affairs until he has become the government's accepted authority on all postal matters As chairman of the senate committee on postoffices and postroads Senator Penrose has worked out an economy scheme which the authorities claim confidently will work a saving to the government of probably $10,000 000 annually This is not an idle boast It is a wholesome fact and as chairman of the committee charged with postal legislation Senator Penrose has already introduced into the senate bills designed to bring about this wonderful revolution One of the Penrose bills proposes to cut off all unnecessary expenditures in the post office department by economizing the time of mail carriers by requiring the placing of receptacles at the door or entrance of residences and business houses for the deposit of mail by carriers The existing practice of compelling carriers to ring door bells wait for an answer if any answer is forthcoming and then consume additional time in placing the mail there it will be reasonably safe in case the door bell is not answered eats unreasonably into the time of the carriers and by a modest estimate costs the government at least $5,000 000 annually Another of the Penrose bills provides that on circulars sent through the mails and upon which postage is not prepaid double postage shall be charged on delivery This measure strikes at a glaring abuse of the mails Now in all cases where unstamped circulars are sent through the mails notices must be sent to addressees This bill will abolish the custom on the part of postage dodgers and will provide pay for the time consumed in securing the required postage This saving of time it is also estimated, will reach annually into millions Another Penrose bill directed at postal economy has already been reported from the Penrose committee on postoffices and postroads with a favorable recommendation It aims at the repeal of the requirement that postmasters issuing money orders shall immediately or mail notify the postmaster on whom the money order is drawn This precaution is amply provided for and the saving of time in just such cases it is estimated will save at least $600 000 annually Still another Penrose bill aims at abolishing the return receipt for a registered letter or package The receipt issued when the letter or package is posted is sufficient and in this apparently trifling way around $100 000 is to be saved to the government annually

Senator Penrose is abundantly confident that the postoffice deficit one of the most perplexing problems with which the government has to deal, will in the near future disappear when the legislation he has personally designed is enacted into laws Not in a long long time has Pennsylvania had a senator more industrious and more capable of intelligent effort than is Senator Penrose In fact his capability and his industry have confused his political enemies, if any there be, and his knowledge of detail and his readiness and willingness to grasp the confusing work of the great postal system of America has simply delighted his admirers

Every day the world is getting additional evidence that postal affairs and their skillful handling are but an incident in the good work of Senator Penrose It will be recalled that less than a year ago Senator Penrose stood harder and stronger than any other man in the United States senate for the policy of protection He had studied the tariff until he had become familiar with every feature of it The industrial conditions at that particular time were indeed threatening Confidence had been shaken severely and labor and money were unemployed In fact the industrial patient was very sick and it was a bad time for experiments. By day and by night, in season and out, Senator Penrose fought for sufficient tariff to protect both labor and capital He threw into the fight his strong personality and his almost inexhaustible fund of tariff knowledge and he got for the nation generally and Pennsylvania in particular what he fully realized in the beginning would be for the best interests of all concerned He yielded only where yielding seemed a virtue and in the end he accomplished more for the whole people than was ever before accomplished by any other senator from Pennsylvania The Pittsburg "Post" that earnest advocate of real Democracy, agrees that Senator Penrose accomplished much by his magnificent battle for protection The "Post" does not give the credit direct to Senator Penrose but it gives the detailed result of the existing tariff legislation in the list of concerns in and about Pittsburg which have advanced wages since the tariff was revised as follows

President Brown of the New York Central announces that the railroad wage advances already made or to be made before the end of the current year will exceed $100 000 000 Jones & Laughlin Steel Company 6 000 men 6 per cent United States Steel Corporation Pittsburgh district 100 000 men 6 per cent Pittsburgh Coal Operators' Association 40 000 men 7½ per cent Pittsburgh Railways Company, 4 000 men about 4 per cent Pennsylvania Railroad Company, several thousand men 6 per cent Baltimore & Ohio railroad several thousand men, 6 per cent New York Central railroad several thousand men, 6 per cent Shang-Chalfant Steel Company about 600 men 10 per cent Republic Iron and Steel Company, several thousand men 6 per cent Postal Telegraph Company 250 men, 5 to 25 per cent Central Penn[illegible] Pittsburgh Coal Company and including coke manufacturers, 100,000 men, about 6 per cent

Upon this magnificent record the regular Republican organization is proud to stand No apologies are necessary and the ambitious fellows who are hunting for office with a dark lantern with a view to blinding the voters of the State to the real condition and the real record of achievement are not likely to make substantial progress Pennsylvania in all its industrial ramifications was never happier than it is today The voters have their minds made up on this very important fact.

THE BEY'S GUEST.

He Was Ready For the Emergency and Conquered the African.

A show of force is often the best kind of diplomacy A writer in the Paris Temps tells a story of the French admiral Dupetit Thouars, who had been intrusted with the mission of exacting reparation from an African bey who had insulted a French consul

As Dupetit Thouars demands were supported by the forcible argument of loaded cannon the bey acknowledged that he had been too hasty and proffered profuse apologies He even invited the admiral to his table and had a sumptuous repast prepared for his guest

"The bey is inclined to be mischievous" said he "and when he strokes his beard and smiles you may be sure that he is concocting some mischief"

"We shall see" was Dupetit Thouars reply

He reached the bey's palace in good time Profuse compliments and salutations were exchanged All at once the admiral's foot met some soft, hairy substance lying on the carpet under the table He bent down and saw a huge lion showing his formidable teeth The bey smiled and stroked his beard

Dupetit Thouars did not wince, but called his dragoman

"My pistols," was all he said

The servant saluted retired and brought back a pair of pistols on a silver tray The admiral took them and placed them on the table before him But the bey still smiling continued to stroke his patriarchal beard

"Tell the commander," he said to the dragoman, "that if those pistols are for the purpose of blowing out my lion's brains they are quite insufficient and perfectly useless"

Then, like a skilled fencer countering his opponent's thrust, after the bey's ironical advice had been translated Dupetit Thouars replied

"Tell his highness that my pistols are not there to kill his lion, but to blow his own brains out at the first movement of this objectionable carpet"

Gravely, but a little pale, the man interpreted

The smile died away on the bey's lips, and he no longer stroked his beard

"My lion," said he, "is too well trained even to scratch one of my guests, but since he is not wanted he shall be sent away"

At a word from the bey the lion slowly and heavily left the room, like an obedient dog.

Foiled.

Noiselessly, but with all his might, the burglar tugged at the dressing table drawer In vain It refused to open He tugged again.

"Give it another jerk," said a voice behind him

The burglar turned

The owner of the house was sitting up in bed and looking at him with an expression of the deepest interest on his face.

"Jerk it again There's a lot of valuable property in that drawer, but we haven't been able to open it since the damp weather began. If you can pull it out I'll give you a handsome royalty on everything that's"—

But the burglar had jumped out through the window, taking a part of the sash with him.—Exchange

WHEN WOMEN REGISTER.

A Hotel Clerk Explains Why a Blotter Is Necessary.

"Hotel clerks get to be great observers of human nature," said an old hotel "lobbyist." "During the many hours out of each day that I spend warming this chair I have learned many tricks of their trade which go to prove my statement.

"In fact, this clerk here has a peculiar trick of his own which shows how keen an observer he is. If you watch him at work you will find whenever a woman is registering he holds a blotter so as to hide the other names on the page. At first when I noticed it I thought that he was merely holding the blotter in readiness to use it on the newly written name, but when I found that he did it only when a woman was registering my curiosity got the better of me, and I asked the reason.

"'Why,' said he, 'women are the most nervous creatures in the world. I hold that blotter up to show that I am not watching them write their names and at the same time to keep them from trying to excel the other handwriting on the page. If they noticed that I was watching them closely it is a safe bet that they would get nervous and make an awful botch of their signatures trying to be fancy. On the other hand, if they saw a particularly pretty signature on the next line the chances are that they would try to improve theirs with a flourish or two, which generally means a choice blot to be scratched out by yours truly.'

"I decided to test his theory by looking over a woman's shoulder while she registered. The result was just what he said it would be."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A Story That Varies.

There is a story more or less diffused of a young bride on her wedding day playing the game of hide and seek and concealing herself in one of those ancient carved chests of large size. After she had got in the lid closed, and she found herself unable to raise it again, for it fastened with a spring, and she was shut in. Search was made for her in every quarter but the right one, and great perplexity and dismay were caused by her disappearance. It was not till years after, when chance led to the opening of the chest, that the body of the young bride was discovered and the mystery of her disappearance solved.

The story is found in so many places that it may be questioned whether it is true of any one of them. Rogers tells it of a palace in Modena. The chest in which the poor bride was found is shown at Bramshill, in Hampshire, the residence of Sir John Cope. Another similar chest with precisely the same story attached to it was long shown at Marwell Old Hall, between Winchester and Bishop's Waltham.

The folk tale of Catskin or Peau d'Ane represents the girl flying with her bridal dresses from a marriage that is repugnant to her, and as this tale is found all over Europe it may have metamorphosed itself into that of the bride who got into a chest and died there.—Cornhill Magazine.

Detecting a Thief.

Some of the stories in the "Folklore of the Holy Land" seem to be at least founded on fact. And, indeed, when we come down to quite recent times we find undoubtedly genuine stories that might have been told of the days of the caliphs.

A goldsmith of Jaffa complained that his house had been robbed and remarked that the Egyptian occupation had not brought security.

The pasha promised redress.

The next day he came to the man's shop and in the presence of a great crowd ordered the executioner to give the door a hundred lashes.

Then he stooped as if to listen. "The door tells nonsense," he cried; "another hundred!"

He stooped again.

"The same tale; the door persists that the thief is somewhere in this crowd of honest people and that he has some of the dust and cobwebs from the shop on his turboosh."

He had his eye on the crowd and saw a man hastily raise his hand to brush his fez.

The man was arrested and confessed his guilt.

A Chromatic Love Affair.

"Marooned!" muttered the villain, turning white and striking his forehead.

Violet, pearl of women, had refused him again.

He lapsed into a brown study, wondering if he were too green to win any woman's love. Perhaps she objected to his prematurely gray hair, or could it be that the cardinal virtues of his rival outweighed his old gold?

The hero entering, black as a thunder cloud, readily solved the mystery.

"There's a yellow streak in you!" he cried. "In the hope of winning my betrothed, Violet, you have jilted Alice, and it has made Alice blue."

The villain rose, madder than a hornet, purpling with rage beneath his tan. But before he could speak the hero had pinked him with his sword.

Violet screamed. Terror caught her.

But her lover soothed her.

"Red of him at last," he murmured, folding her in his arms and kissing her cherry lips as the crimson sun sank in the west, partially obscured by the London smoke.

To the Voters of Washington County:

I beg leave to announce myself as a candidate to succeed myself as a member of the Legislature from Washington county, and to solicit the votes and influence of the electors of this county for my re-nomination at the primaries to be held in June.

In again presenting myself as a candidate for this high office, I am not unmindful of the honors that have been conferred upon me in having been chosen as a representative of the past two sessions, believing, however, that with the added experience that such service brings, that I can be of greater use to my constituents than ever before.

As a candidate I am unpledged, and should I be returned to the Legislature, will endeavor in the future, as in the past, to represent all the people of the county.

Very respectfully,

CHAS. A. BENTLEY.
